Acknowledgements

None of the excavations documented in this report could have been undertaken without the voluntary help and support given by the many individuals who took part. Special thanks must go to Sam Gorin who took over the direction of the excavations following the tragic death of Malcolm Dean in 1970. As well as discussing the excavations, Sam provided access to additional site records and finds not stored at Nottingham University or Rutland County Museum. Of the other individuals involved in the excavations, only a few are known to the writer, but I would like to thank those who have provided additional photographic evidence (Jim Neville, Valerie Nourish, and Shirley Priest) and those who have given freely of their time to discuss the sites (John Golds and Bill Thomas). During the latter years of excavation, M.J. Gleeson Group plc, contractors for Anglian Water Authority, and consultant engineers T and C Hawkesley were particularly helpful in bringing discoveries to the notice of the archaeologists and for leaving areas available for excavation.

Much of the post-excavation work was undertaken by post-graduate students on the MA course in Post-Excavation Skills in the School of Archaeological Studies, Leicester University, supervised by staff of the School among whom I would particularly like to thank Anthony Gouldwell, Annie Grant, Graham Morgan, Deirdre O'Sullivan, Jenny Wakely and Rob Young.

Additional post-excavation work was undertaken by staff of Leicestershire Museums and special thanks must go to Anthony Reed for undertaking conservation work on the finds from the 'Empingham I' Early Anglo-Saxon cemetery (Site 3) and for Richard Knox for illustrating them. Other illustration work for the report was undertaken by David Hopkins (Leicestershire Archaeology Unit), Martha de Bethune (University of Nottingham), Cain Hegarty, Deborah Miles-Williams, Lucy Farr (School of Archaeology, University of Leicester), and individual authors.

The project could not have been undertaken without the generous financial support of English Heritage throughout, and I would like to thank successive East Midlands Team inspectors Deborah Priddy and Andrew Brown for monitoring the project.

Finally, I would especially like to thank Peter Liddle, Keeper of Archaeology for Leicestershire, who initially suggested the project and has provided constant encouragement and inspiration throughout, and Richard Buckley(ULAS), Neil Christie (School of Archaeology, University of Leicester) and staff of the Type Foundry, Northampton, for steering the production through the final stages.

Note: Most of the text was prepared during the period 1991-3 and although some up dating has taken place during the final editing stages, it should be borne in mind that many of the specialist reports will not incorporate the results of fieldwork and research published since.
